Cutting-edge products, education and fun to bridge the True Stories between ability and disability. Over the past half-century or more, the public has come to scorn power imbalances based on gender, race, religion and sexual orientation, and historic gains have been achieved in the pursuit of equality. Not every family is able to do this for a plethora of reasons, or even should, but hearing the countless stories of these children making their way painfully through the school system just makes me feel a pang of sorrow that I can't just hug them all and let them be who they are.
