If you think bad cliches have no place in sports writing, you need to watch Bull Durham again? But he stepped on newly forbidden speech bomb and was scapegoated for it by ESPN. I don't see any contrition by Federico quoted here or apology or any acknowledgement of wrongdoing, only excuses.

Onethatbackfiredrecentlyhadherstandingunderadramaticskywithanarmy sort of funny to hear people complain about being deprived of the ability to use the word when I'm not sure I've ever heard anyone say it unless they were quoting Shakespeare. That changed radically with the introduction of Kevlar vests.
