All participants - CEOs, managers, 12 Management Mistakes members, support staff - must understand that we are firstly humans, and only then do we associate with job titles and work duties. We all know markets can be volatile. One-on-one weekly meetings offer managers opportunities to build relationships with team members while providing and receiving feedback. Our experience is the only foundation we use to predict future changes. So sticking to a rapidly out-dated plan is foolish. With the wrong person, you'll have wasted valuable time and resources if things don't work out and they leave.
